

PIER PAOLO
PASOLINI
POET OF ASHES

CINEMA • EXHIBITIONS
LECTURES • MUSIC • THEATER

Pasolini is always welcome in New York. As a poet, novelist, director, but especially as a free spirit. In this city and in this country, where freedom of speech is the value at the foundation of all the other freedoms, he is remembered as a myth. Courageous, non-conformist, a rebel against political power but also against any concept of culture as a magic circle, as a clique or a sect. For years New York has admired this intellectual, who was so different from the "official" intellectuals, and envied us him. Now it can get to know him better, through readings, meetings, conferences, and screenings. Because Pasolini was an artist in the Renaissance mold, antithetical to specialization, an enlightened craftsman who surpassed – in every sense – the boundaries between of artistic disciplines and fields. His work is an archipelago as vast as his spirit.

Claudio Angelini

Director of the Italian Cultural Institute

One year after organizing two exhibits dedicated to Beni Montresor, the Fondazione Aida is back in New York with one of the most interesting and complex projects it has ever attempted, dedicated to Pier Paolo Pasolini, one of the great master of the twentieth century. Through the poet of Casarsa we are pursuing our wish to pay homage to those who have made Italian history an unavoidable point of reference in contemporary thought. Beacons of a resistant, counter-current thinking, outside the tracks of politically-aligned culture, perennially living the paradox and the fatigue of the unheeded prophet. For Pasolini the Fondazione Aida has built and envisioned a new concept for a project, a more horizontal approach, that organizes around the figure of the master not only conferences and exhibits but also music, theater, publishing, and cinema.

An expanded dream, spread through communion and friendship and brought into being at a solid table of understanding and strong, proactive will.

Speaking about Pasolini became a conversation with fellow voyagers who enthusiastically built this great event together with us, sharing their absolutely vital energy and force. I would thus like to thank Meri Malaguti, our tireless organizer, Graziella Chiarcossi for her precious assistance, and all the Italian Institutions, namely the Italian Cultural Institute of New York, the Fondazione Cinema per Roma, the Fondazione Musica per Roma, IMAIE, the Ministry of Cultural Heritage and Activities, the Cultural Commission of the Friuli Venezia Giulia Region, and the Cineteca di Bologna, that have made possible this important celebration.

Roberto Terribile

Vice President of the Fondazione Aida

The title of the retrospective in New York, inspired by an autobiographical poem of Pier Paolo Pasolini, has a double meaning. It recalls the lines of "Gramsci's Ashes" but also the ashes of a world that no longer exists: the archaic, folkloristic culture of the peasant world, which according to Pasolini represented the most authentic reality of humankind. In his never-ending experimentation with expressive forms (poetry, narrative, cinema, theater), the Friulian poet was at once an artist "more modern than any modern" and an intransigent witness, passionate and lucid about the transformation that had leveled all cultural diversity under the sole sign of consumerist modernity. The body, as the expressive theater and form of reality, was at the center of his work and his cinema: we have therefore chosen "the body's truth" as the title and dominant theme of this exhibition, which covers some of the essential moments in Pasolini's cinema from 1962 (Mamma Roma) to 1968 (Teorema).

Professor of Iconography of the Theater at the University of Siena

The Fondazione Musica per Roma and the Fondazione Cinema per Roma are delighted to have contributed to the realization of the project "Pier Paolo Pasolini Poet of Ashes". This is a major new opportunity to remember and to introduce through exhibits, performances, photographic and obviously film retrospectives, the work of the unforgettable Italian film director, poet, and novelist, who died tragically in 1975. We consider Pasolini one of the most significant and acclaimed intellectuals of the twentieth century, an artist who through words and images related in an extraordinary manner the condition of contemporary humanity, grasping its universal implications.

This is why we think that it is so important to re-propose to the American public aspects of his creativity, together with images that testify to his style of working, along with critical analyses and reflections that contribute to a deeper knowledge of the work of one of the most original artists of the late twentieth century.

Goffredo Bettini

President of the Fondazione Cinema per Roma

Gianni Borgna

President of the Fondazione Musica per Roma

It is an important moment for Italian culture when a man as significant to twentieth-century Italian art as Pier Paolo Pasolini receives the embrace and attention of the United States at some of New York's and indeed the country's most prestigious cultural institutions, through a multi-faceted critical retrospective of his work. The Italian Ministry of Cultural Heritage and Activities, through the Istituto per il Libro of the General Directorate for Books and the Cultural Institutes, is therefore pleased to have contributed to 'Pier Paolo Pasolini Poet of Ashes', an event that enables us to illuminate the poetic heart and literary inspiration of so many of Pasolini's films: the exquisite poetry, literature, and cinema that breathe in this important celebration.

IMAIE, the Institute for the administration of the rights of performing artists, supports by statute initiatives organized by Artists and Associations aimed at promoting cultural and artistic forms of expression. IMAIE participates in all those projects presenting an added value for their aims and protagonists such as in this case, where a series of different events are organized to present abroad the essence and the work by Pier Paolo Pasolini, who influenced poetry, literature and all the arts in the post-war period of Neorealist Italy. The Pasolini's celebration in New York, for its aims in accordance with the IMAIE's purposes, is even more meaningful as widens the horizons of Culture at international level, in a world where the new technologies risks to annul human creativity.

Images, stories, sensations: Italian cinema d'auteur, even after the passage of time, maintains intact its ability to stir emotions and to provoke through the often shattering rawness that it gives back to reality.

Pasolini, perhaps more than others, knew how to push this rigor and toughness (or purity) to the threshold of pain and, because of this, may have been more disturbing than many others. With the support of the retrospective "Pier Paolo Pasolini Poet of Ashes," the Consorzio per la Tutela dell'Asti hopes to help people get to know more, and better, the words of Pasolini, a man of multi-faceted genius, a prolific and controversial film director, symbol and expression of a Country striving to tell its stories and to address its own history. Asti D.O.C.G., the top Italian spumante in the world and the pride of Piedmont for more than 150 years, the genuine product of a land already sung by authors such as Beppe Fenoglio and Cesare Pavese, shares with Pasolini its Italian origins and its esteem for the labor of the thousands of hands who know how to grow the grapes on the vine, tend them with passion, and translate them into emotion. Our best wishes for an enjoyable event.

*Sweetness.
The poetry of the earth.*

ASTI D.O.C.G. Sparkling wine for New York's tribute to Pier Paolo Pasolini.

It is right here in Piemonte, amongst the orderly rows of generous vines in the hills between Asti and Monferrato, that Asti D.O.C.G. is made. It's right here that the moscato grape finds ideal soil and climate but also unique know-how. Over a century ago a natural fermentation method was used here to develop a unique sparkling wine that preserves intact all the aroma of freshly picked grapes. Sweet but balanced, light yet intense, with unmistakable notes of linden, wysteria and orange. Part of the heritage of Italy's grand food and wine culture. Only the earth is capable of such poetry.
